

CENSORSHIP SHOWS EFFECT UPON WAR NEWS RECEIVED

NOTHING DEFINITE LEARNED FROM SCENE OF FIGHTING OF PAST FEW DAYS.

FRANCE IS ADVANCING

Russia Claims Victories Over the Austrian Forces—Naval Victories Are Reported.

The censorship put into effect by the British authorities over the movement of the empire's armed forces afloat and in Belgium, is effective to a remarkable degree.

Censored dispatches from Brussels and Paris have frequently referred to the presence of British troops arrayed against the forces of Germany, but no word has been allowed to come through from any source to indicate what the numerical strength of British field army may be, where the units may be located.

Equal secrecy shrouds the movements of the British warships believed to be holding the German fleet in check in the North Sea.

Not one word has come through of the position of any British or German battleship cruiser or torpedo boats in these waters.

As far as the general public is concerned naval activities in European waters are a sealed book.

LOCALS WHITEWASH NEWARK GIANTS IN POORLY PLAYED GAME

Cardinals Have Easy Time Trouncing in Poorly Played Game

Whatever claim the Newark Giants had on the championship of southern Wisconsin was gently dropped by the Cardinals in Sunday's game at the Jackson diamond. For the home nine put the village invaders to rout by a score of 13 to 0. The zero also represented Newark's ball playing ability, even if they have defeated all the Beloit nine and have a record of fifteen straight games.

The slaughter was a long drawn affair with little good baseball to give the proceedings for the Newark fans. The game was a whitewash, though the Cards were lucky in being able to use the whitewash brush. For the Cards, the new mound artist, Meldeen, who hails from Palmyra, performed and behaved reasonably well, considering the calibre of the team against him. Meldeen showed a lot of smoke, but was not forced to put on any of the twist stuff during the game.

For the invading team a tall, lanky southpaw, with a big record, occupied the pitching mound and after the Cards had banged out twelve hits the conclusion of the game was then at hand. Carroll had a grin and a glove. Coupled with the many wallops of the Cards, the Newark players repeatedly gumbled the defensive end, missing up the game with a bunch of bores and misplays. Southpaw Carroll stayed on the hill until the eighth, when Moon, of Beloit, attempted to try his luck and Cards rolled over the Beloit star by sending two more runs across, just to show him he was no better than Carroll.

After the Cards took care of the first three Newark swagsmen, the bombardment started right off the bat, and before the inning was over the Newark aggregation were ready to call a 24 hours armistice, to bar the door and for the Cardinals. The rally and charge came after two were down, but when Hell aimed a thud down short and Hall was safe on a bunt by the first baseman, Ryan slammed a fly ball. Carroll went for two bases, scoring two. Porter and Nehr got sore at Carroll's grin and scored the other base runners, walling four runs for the inning.

Left Carroll escaped any serious punishment until the sixth, when the home troops brought out a heavy artillery and shot the Giants' bulwarks to pieces, scoring seven runs on five hits. This time the invaders were ready to show the white flag, but Captain Porter declared he would fight it out on the field. He took all night, which it did. The attack on Carroll's straight one was disastrous and the reality of the visitors' infield helped seal the total. The side batted around and five hits were recorded and three wild pitches put the visitors on the retreat from all hopes of holding the fort. By this time the Cards had sukked whatever attempts the home troops made at rounding the bases, although they leaped the sacks in the second inning with only one down. A heave to home caught one shy and Nehr gobbled up a long fly for the last out. The alien team got two on in the sixth, but Porter prevented any crossing of the line by knocking down a hard drive and holding the runner at third. Ryan promptly snuffed a fly but got the runner at home on a well placed ball. In the eighth, with Moon doing the serving, Sullivan hit and Hell was safe on an error. Ryan grounded a hit, scoring two runs, ending the battle for Meldeen, and the Cardinals backing away from the plate in Newark's half of the ninth.

On Next Sunday the Cardinals have scheduled a game with the Madison Kips, one of the fastest in this section of the state, and a game of baseball may be expected on that date. Summary of Sunday's game:

Harry Stone, since his return from Australia, is getting a deal of public notice. I am told that he left New York city two years ago, ill-kempt and disheveled in aspect and resembling in many ways a bum or loafer. After two years he returns resplendent in garb and each and every pocket filled with nickels. In the two years he was in Australia Stone won the welter title, after beating all the adversaries the Australians could find to oppose him. As you may have guessed he picked up quite a little change while away and altogether enjoyed a very pleasant visit to other shores. Stone plans to take an active part in fighting affairs in these U. S. this coming winter and it isn't unlikely that he will have a few or two at the lightweights. It is known that he can make the 133 without a very great effort and, there will be lots of money in lightweights fighting next season. Without question we will hear quite a bit more of Harry Stone.

Minneapolis, a ball team that has won three pennants in the American Association, is skipping through the season now with only fourteen players. TAKES COUNT FROM OLD FATHER TIME

Leach Cross is once more in the ascendancy. His recent victory over Joe Rivers will bring him a bout with Charles White and many another lucrative battle. Somehow or other it seems a hard matter to put the New York dentist on the shelf for keeps. An unfortunate performance is generally followed by a fast go, wherein he shows all of his best speed and seems to have recovered the class of his heyday. As long as Leach can continue such a program he need not fret over an occasional beating. If the coin doesn't roll in at one time it will at another.

A glance at the foregoing list shows the effect of the European war on the markets of Janesville. Prices which were in general during the past week broke on Saturday and there has been little material advance along any lines except sugar.

The wholesale markets, thus far, have been troubled most by the "high" prices of sugar. Retail dealers in Janesville today seemed desirous of keeping the market down as low as possible. This was true along all lines.

Taken as a whole, the situation, while troublesome, is not so acute as the general public seems to think. True, prices have risen, but the tide course on "hard times" has, in a large measure, made people pessimistic. Decrease in provision purchases was noticeable Saturday. The average household, if it cannot get the general run of foods at the normal prices, refuses to secure them at the prices of luxuries, according to the retailers.

Canned goods in general show a slight increase, more noticeable where sugar is used. Foreign olives and olive oil are disappearing from the market and small supplies of the fruit and oil of California are taking their place. With practically no crop of olives in the west, it is not unexpected that even the domestic product will be high.

The prices of vegetables and garden truck has not changed much, and it is expected that this week will show advance. Encouraging reports of large crops helped the market.

Cheese has gone up slightly. Heretofore in the small barrels is advancing and expectations are that the supply will be ample for the next few days.

A big advance in the price of lemons occurred during the past week. They have gone from $4 and $4.50 to $7 and $8 per box. They retailed at 40 cents per dozen Saturday and today are about 50 cents.

The advance of foodstuffs was first felt on Friday for those who dine at the downtown cafes. The majority of the places have advanced prices slightly, or else served smaller portions. Most of them not charged prices on their menus.

Automobile owners are hard hit as a result of the war. All manufacturers of auto tires have advanced their prices. The price of tires was $12.50 an advance of 12.50, 15 and 20 per cent over that of a week ago, according to the make of tire desired. Other rubber goods as bags, gloves, etc., have increased in proportion.

Some substitutes for Christmas tree decorations will have to be found. Germany holds the market on these and dealers are also unable to procure the electrical decorations which are made by the Germans. Also the great tonnage of the world are in the hands of the Germans and the shipping should be under way at present. None are coming from any country abroad. American producers are working overtime expecting large orders for domestic articles and the cut-off of the foreign supply. They will be higher, too, this year, as the American manufacturer cannot compete with foreign labor in manufacturing of similar nature.

Many Janesville merchants who had large stocks of goods on hand during the past two weeks have little cause to pay the advanced price demanded in the wholesale market. As a result Janesville is enjoying slightly lower prices than reported in cities in this vicinity. The supplies on hand cannot last long, however, and should the strife continue no doubt increases will be made.

Business men, however, are optimistic and do not give up for the advance. Housewives who purchase their bread and pastries from the bakeries keep inquiring if prices will advance along this line. It is costing one firm from $160 to $200 per week to meet sugar and flour bills and other ingredients over any week a short time ago. Advances have not been made and none are expected unless the war situation continues for an extra long period.

Candles are also scarce. This is due to the fact that the supply is cut off by the war. The candles are made in Germany and the supply is cut off by the war.

With the punch boards and draw games for prize boxes of sweets under ban in Janesville, local authors will be compelled to purchase "Doc Coo's" and the young ladies of their compulsion for the better grades of candy are going out of sight.

Various hardware lines show price effects. Tinware of all kinds with exception of tinware, the latter over 100 per cent the last week. Tin is secured in Wales and the supply in the United States is limited. Wales advanced a dollar per cwt. and no advance is secured by dealers in this city.

Stationary dealers anticipate a rise should the war continue, but this morning expressed doubt if much more would be noticeable in a month or more. The present time, will not rise this far. The cutting off of the woodpulp and rag supply from Europe may eventually show its effect, but not during this year.

The Janesville drygoods market to a considerable extent was affected during the latter part of last week. Linens have advanced 5 to 12 per cent. Imported drygoods have gone up 10 to 15 per cent of the bristles used in the United States are imported from Germany and Russia. Manufacturers see an opportunity for that industry to develop here. Most of the brushes are made in Germany, France and Japan, but nearly all that supply has been cut off.

The sharp let down in the price of wheat at Liverpool and the pressure on the great markets there has proved the wheat back to the markets here in a short time during the last few days, and conditions now point to still lower prices for this product.

Corn will likely continue a weather affair, and prices will pivot on the weather in the great belt. While farmers have been a little more free in unloading during last week it is thought that they will hold more tightly to their surplus in the future.

Stocks of hog product are burdened some without any European outlet for the surplus. At the Milwaukee market Saturday a slump of twenty cents was felt. As it was the market fell back to the level which was in force before the big advances at the opening of the week.

WILL EXTEND SEWER UNDER MAIN STREET

City About Completes Two Blocks of Three Foot Cement Storm Sewer on Oakland Avenue.

Work on the Oakland avenue cement storm sewer is expected to be completed by city employees today, the forms being laid from Main street north to South Division street. Wednesday it is planned to extend the sewer across Main street to the river outlet as it was decided that the fifteen inch tile would be unable to carry off the drainage water from the thirty-six inch new sewer to the eight inch river outlet.

Manholes at South Third and Division street have been completed and connected with the ten, twelve and fifteen inch tile of the old sewer. The main sewer which is expected to thoroughly drain this region. Instead of constructing the waterway farther east on Oakland avenue, the city officials concluded to push the work to afford the water a shorter run to the river, fearing that Main street would be flooded in time of high water when the fifteen inch tile would not be able to accommodate the flood waters. Next year the first work that will be done will be to extend the sewer from the three-foot sewer from the Main street connection to the river replacing the eighteen-inch tile.

Superintendent of Streets P. J. Goodman has had a gang of city employees working on the sewer for the past week cleaning and repairing gutters which had been clogged allowing the surface water to flow back on the streets.

The remains of Mrs. R. A. Dewey of Rogers Park were brought to this city at 11:45 Sunday over the C. & N. W. and were interred at once at Oak Hill cemetery, where a simple but beautiful service was read by Rev. J. C. Hazen of the First Baptist church of this city.

Mrs. Dewey was a former resident of this city, and had many friends who were grieved to learn of her demise. She leaves to mourn her loss one daughter, Mrs. Charles Curdiss of Chicago; a stepdaughter, Mrs. Edgar Smith of this city, and a granddaughter, Mrs. Edith Schmitt of Chicago.

Many beautiful flowers were sent by friends here as well as in Chicago. Those who accompanied the remains from Chicago to this city were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Curdiss, and Mrs. and Mrs. Grant Carpenter and Mr. Brown.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

READING CHARACTER BY COLORS.
Did you ever try to read character by color combinations? If you haven't, try it some time. It is an interesting study. Of course, I don't mean that the colors a woman combines will reveal minute details about her character, but they will often give you an interesting clue to the general type to which she belongs. For color harmonizes, just like sound harmonizes, range from the simple to the complex, and are appreciated by people with the corresponding range of personalities.

For instance, blue and white or pink and white is an absolutely simple and obvious color combination. It is the kind which children appreciate and which becomes their best. It is like a childish melody in which some very simple phrase is reiterated.

Pink and green is just a little less obvious. I feel sure that the lady in the pink hat with the green wreath and the green gown with the pink ruff is a sweet, nice, commonplace sort of person, and when she turns her face toward me, it carries out that conjecture. It is sweet and rather pretty, although entirely without that peculiar force which we vainly try to define by calling it "fascination." Had I seen the face first I fancy I could have deduced the pink and green from it.

Also, given that color combination and that face, one could guess the general character of the wearer. She is the sort of person who has a fine fund of friendly remarks about the weather; she says the nice, obvious thing on all subjects and she is given to bromidioms, seldom missing a chance to say "It never rains when you take your umbrella."

I am sure she would be pleasant though not stimulating to live with. When I was a child I was told that blue and green did not "go together." My eyes were not opened on this subject until a dramatic reader came to our town one evening in a gown in which the blending of blue and green was as exquisitely harmonious and simultaneously satisfied eye and ear and brain.

Of course, blues and greens must be combined with judgment. You may not carelessly throw two shades together, but the simple and obvious combination of pink and white or blue and white is a popular song. It is "close harmony"; a mistake would be fatal; success is its own reward.

Yellow and gray, coral and old blue, brown and black are two three more examples of the less obvious color harmonies. Pale pink and deep red, in the first another. There are three stages of pink which are popularly supposed to be so "becoming" she wears that bright blue which is popularly supposed to be so "becoming" and which actually kills her hair; in the second she adopts the various shades of green, which are excellent; and in the third she awakes to the fact that certain shades of pink (once her tabooed color) are her most becoming setting.

Of course, character study by color combinations is not an exact science. Far from it. It merely supplies one or two more symbols by which we can read that most complex and fascinating of all hieroglyphics—the human character.

Heart and Home Problems

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I wrote you for advice some time ago and I wish to thank you for it, as it did me so much good. I am a married woman, 40 years old. My husband is ten years older than I. Before I got your answer we had a quarrel and I went to town to work, as you advised me to do. But I did not work long before he came to see me. He had the paper you answered was in some of our friends' hands. He told me that he did not know we had quarreled. He turned the paper over to my husband, and gives us all his work to do and also gets other work for him.

After I came back I was taken sick. My husband was good to me this time. Mrs. Thompson, he does not drink and is a good husband now. He got me a carpet and many other things that I never expected him to get. I put in a nice garden and have chickens and can go to my mother's and all the places I want to go. But I never neglect my home, for I love it. I have got my house all clean and new curtains up, and it looks really cozy now. I have worked hard and done it all myself, and now I can sit down and read in a clean house.

And I am to become a mother for the first time in my life! I am so happy. I am not very well, but I work a little while around the house, then I go and sew a while. I have made for baby two sets, all by hand. I love to do it. I just cannot keep my hands still, I am so happy. The whole world looks bright to me now. You said if I loved this man I would stick to him. I do love him. I always did love him, or I would not have taken his name. Of course I was disgusted by the way he acted and then my condition, which I didn't know at the time, made me blue and down-hearted. I did not know until I came home. May God bless you, Mrs. Thompson. I wish that every wife could be as happy as I am now, and I will do all in my power to help others to be happy also. I do not know what I am to come to, but I will go through my trial with the grace of God and trust in Him to guide me. EXPECTANT MOTHER.

I wish every man in the world would read this letter. Perhaps it would help him to be kind to the woman who depends on him for kindness as well as support. A man can do so much to make the world happy if he will only try, and he will make himself happier at the same time. I am so glad that peace has come into this household, and I believe it will come to stay. These two people have seen the light, and when the baby comes it will be something more to live for. All happiness to you, dear expectant mother, and to your good man! ...

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.
When making apple float, try baking the apples instead of stewing them. The pulp is removed from the skins and mixed with the whites of the eggs, which makes the float much lighter than the old way.
When making apple pie the flavor is much improved and the apples keep in good color if a few drops of lemon juice are squeezed over the apples just before the crust is put on.
To keep rugs from rolling up at the corners sew a heavy iron ring on each corner on the under side.
Never wring gloves unless they have a tendency to stretch. Gently squeeze the water out of them and pat them with a dry towel. Wringing is said to contract overstretching.
THE TABLE.
Tapioque Meringue—Soak one-half cup granulated tapioca to a plump in cold water for half an hour. Add a pinch of salt and cook slowly twenty minutes until transparent. If too thick add a little more boiling water. Boil one quart of milk in a farina kettle with the yellow yolk of four eggs. Beat the yolks of four eggs with a half cup sugar, add slowly to the milk, stirring until smooth and creamy, but do not allow it to boil. When thickened, remove from the fire, add a teaspoonful of flavoring and thoroughly mix with tapioca. Whip the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth with three tablespoonfuls powdered sugar and a tablespoonful of flavoring. Spread over the top of the pudding, which should have been poured into the serving dish, then set in a coolish oven to puff and color a golden yellow.
Cheese Omelet—Three eggs, two tablespoonfuls flour, two tablespoonfuls butter, half cup grated cheese, one teaspoon sweet milk. Heat milk, melt take out necessary quantity and beat place for weeks. When it is wanted, mix it on tablespoon cream or milk to every two of dressing. With this dressing a delicious salad may be made of either fruit or vegetables. There is art in mixing vegetables in one salad in such a way as to give particular flavors. Peas and carrots go well together; string beans and cauliflower; beets and cabbage; asparagus can be served by itself.

Eggs in Tomato Sauce—One tablespoonful of butter, one and one-half cupfuls of salt, sugar, one tablespoonful of flour, a pinch of soda, pepper, five eggs. Make a sauce of the butter, flour, the tomato which is rubbed through the strainer, soda, salt and a little pepper and sugar. Cook five minutes; drop in the five eggs and cook until the whole is firm, basting the eggs often with the sauce. Lift the eggs on squares of toast and pour sauce around them.

Everyday Talks To Everyday People

(BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.)

In the face of all that has been said and is being written about the care of children's teeth, it would seem superfluous to say anything on the subject. Looking at the teeth of children that you meet everyday, you are forced to acknowledge that while much has been said on the subject there is yet much to be done. Children should be trained early in life to keep their teeth clean; should be taught that a soiled face is not near so strong a proof of uncleanness as are soiled teeth. They should be taught to rise from the dinner table and, just as regular as they go to the kitchen faucet to clean their hands, so should they brush their teeth. At night before going to bed they should repeat the process, taking a copious drink of water after rinsing the mouth out thoroughly. In print this may look formidable, but it is simply itself tooth until you have the habit formed with them. It does not take much time or effort to call to your child as they are leaving the table. It need not be in a clarion tone so that all the neighbors in general know that you are teaching your children to care for their teeth. You can tip them off to their duty without any one save you and they knowing what the little sign means.

In answer to a reader's question as to what will help lusterless hair: Salt is very good for it. Rub plain salt into the hair at night, then tie the hair up in a large handkerchief, or wear a night cap. Brush out the salt in the morning. Several applications of this treatment will bring about a decided improvement in the appearance of the hair. It is well remembered that one's general health has a great deal to do with the condition of the hair. When your hair begins to come out do not rush to town and spend your last cent on some wonderful restorer. Build up your general health and brush and brush and brush your hair. If every woman in this city would put before herself a simple set of physical culture rules and live up to them they would be gratified indeed at the improvement in their general health as well as in their fresh, worth-while view of life. Try it.

SOME UNUSUAL SALADS.

From a firm, ripe watermelon, cut with large scoop used for making potato balls, rounds of the red melon. Serve well chilled in lettuce cups with mint dressing.
Mayonnaise With Vegetables.—Chop very fine one onion, one-half a cucumber, one green pepper and one stalk of celery. Put in a cloth and wring out all the moisture possible. Just before serving stir into very thick mayonnaise.
Tomato and Peanut Salad.—Peel and carefully remove with a spoon the center of firm tomatoes to form a cup. Fill with finely shredded new cabbage and finely chopped roasted peanuts, mix well and add French dressing. Fill the cups and just before serving add a teaspoonful of mayonnaise to each serving.
Cucumber Salad.—Cut up six cucumbers, cover with water and simmer fifteen minutes, letting most of the water boil away. Add salt and cayenne and take from the fire, measure and add a teaspoonful of gelatin to each pint of the liquid. Decorate the bottom of the mold with slices of fresh cucumber and fill with the warm jelly. Set away to become firm. Turn out on a bed of white lettuce and decorate with over-lapping slices of fresh cucumbers.
Tomato and Green Pepper Salad.—Cut rather thick slices of peeled tomatoes and spread each with chopped green pepper, mixed with French dressing, on each place a small white onion, cooked, and French dressing

Yeast Crullers

One quart bread sponge, one pint sugar, three eggs, lard size of an egg, one-half teaspoon baking powder. Mix in dough and let raise until light. Fry in hot lard.

Salad Dressing Without Oil or Butter

Salads, particularly when eaten as an accompaniment to cold meats, are frequently rendered indigestible by the oil or butter in the dressing. The following dressing has been used in our household for years, where one of the members could not digest either oil or butter. To one heaping teaspoonful flour add two heaping teaspoons sugar, one flat teaspoon mustard, two eggs, one-third cup vinegar, two-thirds cup water. Beat eggs until fairly light, mix in vinegar, then water, a little at a time, until the mixture is smooth, put it into a double boiler, cook slowly, stirring constantly. When it thickens remove from fire and place where it will cool. The dressing may be put into a closely sealed preserving can or bottle and kept in a cool

Peggy & Company

Peggy Enters Upon an Adventure With Considerable Relish.

"Just let me out here at the corner," said Peggy as they approached her street. "I must run in and see Ruth Bradley, anyway." And then: "Good by; I had a lovely time, Mr. Anderson."

So it can be seen from the little Peggy has said that she has been motoring with Mr. Anderson. It is also clear from the foregoing that Peggy felt it would be just as well if Mr. Anderson didn't drive her clear up to the house in the full view of the family and most of the neighbors. To sum things up as distinctly as possible, the most idle reasoner can see that Peggy is concealing something from her folks.

It is possible that Peggy would find an even greater enjoyment in Mr. Anderson's companionship if she knew that she had in this the consent and approval of the family. That she hasn't isn't so surprising, after all, since Peggy hasn't asked for it.

And, even though she had, isn't it possible that Peggy enjoys the affair more while she knows that it isn't quite right? Had she thought it over, Peggy might have seen that a part of her pleasure was in the knowledge of misdoing. That the folks would not approve seems to give the thing added zest.

However, it's Peggy's determination to continue her deception as long as she can contrive, and if she is unhappily discovered she feels prepared to reason her side of the matter. If her list of friends, she will tell them, must be examined and censored by all the old maids in town, then she'll give it up right away.

Joke on Depew.
An episode at the Yale bicentennial in 1901 illustrated the readiness of President Hadley's intellectual resources. One of the distinguished guests was the representative of the University of Upsala in Sweden. This gentleman, when received by President Hadley and the corporation in the reception room of the Art school, delivered a long address in Latin. As soon as he had finished, President Hadley made a lengthy reply, also in Latin. "Well, well," said Chauncey M. Depew—at least the story represents him as saying—"I never knew that President Hadley could talk Swedish!"—World's Work.

Warships for China.
When the Creditanstalt, the Escomptebank, and the Laenderbank subscribed a portion of the Chinese loan to the amount of £1,500,000 ($7,293,750) in 6 per cent bonds, it was agreed that the Chinese government should favor Austrian industries with orders for ships. In compliance with this agreement, the construction of three Chinese cruisers has been ordered, which will be built at Montedone, near Trieste. The cruisers will cost 10,000,000 crowns ($2,630,000). It is reported that some of the machinery will be constructed in Bohemian factories.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—Father's Neighbors Are a Helpful Lot.

Fine Feathers

Novelized from Eugene
Walter's Drama by

By
WEBSTER DENISON

Jane had known Bob's history at school. He was a leader, as Brand had said, and she was confident that he would force his way to the front in the business world. Not that she was marrying him from any selfish viewpoint. She loved him, but she was also proud of him, and the last year or two of their married life had seen a tinge of disappointment mingled with his pride. She was still hopeful, or had been until the coming of Brand. In five years Brand had become a millionaire, though it was true that he had started from a higher plane than Bob and with much greater opportunities. But he had made the most of his chances and she found herself wondering now whether Bob had done the same.

All women like the fineries and the luxuries of life, but some crave them more than others. Jane was one of these. She was essentially what Brand read her to be. She had the finesse, the culture of the so-called upper classes, and the inherent longing to be a living part of their order. Still she had a woman's instinct for a home and for this reason she had not opposed her husband's humble venture on Staten Island. She had wished it might be more elaborate, but since it was all they could afford, it was better than none.

And Jane was not selfish. She knew that besides the joy of having her and her five years of their wedded life had brought few thrills to Bob. Perhaps some of the glamor had begun to fade for him, too; the long grind at his work and then the long idle evenings in the flat or the fruitless pleasures of some cheap amusement in the city. This idea of a home had been something new. He had talked about it and planned for it and become so enthusiastic over it that she had entered into the spirit of it and rejoiced with him. And now the spell of this Utopia was gone, at least for her.

Much of her husband's enthusiasm over suburban life was not shared by Jane. When they had moved into the place in the spring her natural love of the artistic had given her a happy interest in her flowers, but there her concern in the rustic pursuits ceased. For his sake she assumed a sympathy that she did not feel. Trunk gardens, Jane thought, were for truck gardeners and while these were useful for laying eggs, they were not interesting to her.

a poultry department that was noted the world over and while he had not specialized in that branch of education his innate liking for all forms of animal life had attracted him to it. When his young Plymouth Rocks had begun to feather out he went into ecstasies if a rooster showed the proper barings on wing and tail, while with Jane the bird's superiority was gauged only from the standpoint of a frying pan.

Such tendencies did not make Jane one bit less a woman. We cannot all be Walt Whitmans, and preference for a steam-heated drawing room to a barnyard, in a woman at least, is no sign of perverted morals. But the hunt for happiness in the cheap suburb was for Jane, a quest founded on false premises. She knew it and now she turned eagerly to the escape.

CHAPTER X.

A Nocturnal Visitor.

In the bungalow now a new era dawned. There was no marked change in Jane's mode of life but there was a vast difference in the spirit of it. A little army of joy gods entered and gave battle to the glooms. Every day in this conflict of mental legions the joys triumphed. Not alone did they crush the foes of Jane's spiritual welfare. Such victories won they took hold of the physical being and with deft touch here and there restored it to the full power of its natural beauty. They put a light into the eyes that had seemed, perhaps, a little tired; added fresh glow to cheeks that had become a little wan; and gave quick elasticity to a step that had grown listless.

Jane was really a beautiful woman. But she was the type that needs the full bloom of attractions to complete the picture of the subtle whole. She was tall and willowy. Vivaciousness made her slimmest a charm; without this spirit she was thin. So, too, her hair, luxuriant, abundant, raven tresses, seemed heavy and added years unless flashing eyes and colored cheeks defied its somberness. And, just as a prosaic life and tired, dulled senses had caused the bird to droop, keeping pace with faded and worn plumage, now new prospects and new feathers caused it to thrill and flutter.

Mrs. Collins, keen observer of all these changes, literally winked the other eye. She was not the kind who scorns gossip but having once met sufficient rebuke from Jane and being more or less a beneficiary of this property she held her peace. If her nerves required material relief now she had but to make the want known. The means was always at hand.

There came presently into the Reynolds household, however, something that disturbed even the equanimity of Mrs. Collins. This was a servant girl. She was inefficient and untrained, but she kept Jane's hands out of the dishwater.

"The extra expense is so little," Jane had told her neighbor. "Why, I pay Frieda only two dollars and a half a week."

Mrs. Collins turned up her nose and opined that the girl was committing larceny, at that. But the idea of the "hired help" rankled just the same. She saw that Jane's hands were getting white and soft while her own were red and rough. She sought refuge in rubber gloves which in many a woman's life are mute evidence of vanity or pathos as the case may be. But Mrs. Collins gave them up. It was no use, she told herself. The hands weren't all Jane was young and pretty and the common bond of complaint over their ill luck had been broken. Whatever it was, good fortune of some sort had come into the younger woman's life and the future seemed to hold promise of more. For Mrs. Collins this meant only more poignant realization of power gone for her and gone never more to return.

One afternoon some three weeks after her first excursion into Fifth avenue Jane was sitting with an open handbag in her lap counting over some money and comparing it with figures in a little notebook. There was a ring at the doorbell, but no response from the maid in the kitchen.

"Frieda," Jane called.

Still there was no reply and Mrs. Collins, a silent spectator of the scene, smiled in scorn.

"Frieda!" Jane repeated, "are you deaf?"

"No'm," came the laconic answer; but there came no Frieda.

Jane's voice rose to the sharp command: "Then answer the bell."

"Yeessum," Frieda agreed, and having divested herself of these two words and exhausted the full measure of her vocabulary, she did as she was told.

At the door was a messenger boy and after much voluble instruction from Jane and more "Yeessum" from Frieda, the real messenger boy came.

came forward with the message. Jane tore it open.

"It's a lovely afternoon for an auto ride," Mrs. Collins remarked innocently.

"No, it isn't that at all," Jane answered. "I mean the message isn't what you think. It's from Bob. He's been sent out of town and can't get home tonight. It's the first time since we've been married. Oh, I know I shall be frightened to death in this place."

"Come over and stay with us," her neighbor invited promptly.

"I'd like to, but—" Jane looked toward the kitchen—"you'd be crowded to make room for me and I couldn't leave Frieda here alone."

Mrs. Collins revealed just a semblance of a sneer.

"I don't think she'd be in any great danger," she said tartly, "but if you do, Mrs. Reynolds, we could make room for her on the sofa."

"No, it's kind of you," Jane decided, "but we'll have to stand it here. Of course, there's no danger. It's just the idea."

So Mrs. Collins desisted and Jane looked forward to the first night she had ever spent alone, or practically alone, and that in the lonely bungalow. She ate her supper in silence and with the fox terrier lying on the rug at her feet settled herself at the table and tried to banish thoughts of herself by reading.

Dick had grown into a fine specimen of his breed. He was an intelligent little brute and good to look at if one enjoys seeing the evidence of caste in dogs as well as men. And like all thoroughbreds of his kind he was most pronounced in his attachments. He was the constant companion of Jane, alert and watchful of her every movement. He had never taken a liking to Brand though that gentleman in his several calls at the bungalow had gone out of his way to appease and cajole him. But despite his own preferences Dick had been forced to feel that the millionaire was welcome. At first he had been openly disgruntled at the intrusion, but Jane had reprimanded him and on one occasion had gently chastised him, so now, whenever Brand appeared, the dog simply sulked. At times he would disappear entirely and not show himself again until the visitor had gone. On two occasions, when he had been taken into the auto with the trio, he had jumped out, and even the sharp tones of his mistress, that usually demanded instant attention, failed to arrest his flight.

Some one has said that in our modern civilization there is no place for dogs. No more is there for some men. It is true that primal instincts remain more acute in dumb animals than in humans, but the primal instincts are not all bad. Loyalty and gratitude may be signs of arrested development. If so, no wonder we see a menace in the dog. We are not prone to turn to dumb pets for guidance in matters pertaining to our acumen. Yet how often in such cases as this of Brand, Jane and the fox terrier is the humble animal the keener. Suggestion that this poor brute's attitude emanated from any power of divination would have met with instant and perhaps just scorn from Jane, yet the day was to come when she would remember it.

The evening was passed in solitude. Jane was reading something of Gaboriau's, an impelling, but not exactly a soothing subject for one who expected to spend the night alone. She was startled from an absorbing part of the tale by that mysterious feeling that warns us of another presence when neither eye nor ear has served. Then a slight shadow flickered across the book. She dropped it and started to her feet with a little cry. Dick, inert and dreaming, leaped up and growled out of mere sympathy, or suspicion. Caught unawares he would take no chances; but having quickly established his outposts and surveyed the field of battle his belligerency vanished. He stood with one paw raised quizzically examining his mistress's face and looking from her to the interloper.

That was Frieda. She was twisting a corner of her blue gingham apron between her coarse hands, struggling between her fear of intruding and her desire to put thought into speech. "Do not creep in in that way, Frieda," Jane cried petulantly. "You're worse than a cat."

She was vexed at herself for having obviously betrayed her fright and angry at the instrument of her fear. But Frieda's inevitable "Yeessum" and her pitiously intended intention to give utterance to some idea restored Jane's equanimity. She spoke more encouragingly.

"What is it?" she asked.

"Mr. Bob. Isn't he coming daily tonight?"

"No, Mr. Reynolds has been the city," Jane replied with emphasis. "Why?"

Frieda crumpled a quarter of the apron between her fists and shifted nervously from one foot to the other. Then with a supreme effort, she got it out.

"I'm scared."

"Scared?"

"Yeessum."

"At what?"

"I don't know, ma'am."

"Nonsense, Frieda," Jane answered bravely, but unconsciously she looked hurriedly about the large room and then down at Dick as if seeking confirmation of her assurance from his calm. For Dick had again subsided to the rug.

"There's nothing to be afraid of, Frieda, any more than if Mr. Reynolds were here. Have you finished with your work?"

"Yeessum."

"Then go up to your room," Jane commanded. "I will sleep upstairs in the room next to yours, instead of in mine."

Dinner Stories

She was very much in love with him, and one evening, while they were alone, she said to him:

"Frank, tell me truly; you have kissed other girls, haven't you?"

"Yes," replied the young man, "but no one you know."

A native of Japan employed on a Japanese paper in New York was riding downtown in a City Hall train recently. He was engrossed in the morning paper and paid little attention to the other passengers. But a fresh-looking young man who sat next to him, and had been eyeing him all along, suddenly asked:

"What sort of 'nese' are you, anyway—a Chinese or a Japanese?"

"The little Jap was not caught napping. Quick as wink he replied:

"What sort of 'key' are you, anyway—a monkey, a donkey or a Yankee?"

"Patrick, you were on a bad spree yesterday," said a friend, reproachfully.

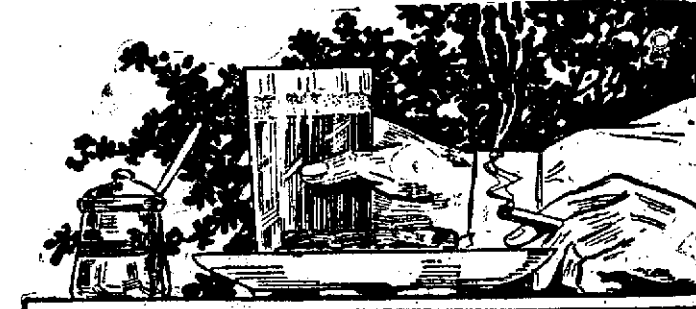

"Yes, sor, I was that," replied Patrick. "Bless me if I wasn't laying in the gutter with a pig. Father Dunn came along an' looked at me, an' he says, says he:

"One is known by the company he keeps."

"And did you get up, Patrick?"

"O' did not; but the pig did."

PIKES PEAK HIGHWAY BOOSTERS START TOUR

Colorado Springs, Mo., Aug. 17.—Hoping to prove that the "Pikes Peak Ocean-to-Ocean Highway" is the most practicable and attractive automobile route across the continent, a big sociability automobile run from Colorado Springs to Salt Lake City began today. Several score of automobilists, representing the country as far east as Indiana, left here early today and will reach the Mormon capital on Aug. 22, in time for the great international carnival, The Wizards of the Wastech.

This run is the last leg of an automobile tour which began at Terre Haute, Ind., on Aug. 6 and brought numerous motor enthusiasts here by way of Springfield, Ill., St. Joseph, Mo., and across the Kansas plains. The distance covered by the run when completed will be 1,750 miles, making one of the largest motor events of the year.

The Pikes Peak Ocean-to-Ocean Highway association was organized last March at a meeting held in St. Joseph, Mo. Despite the fact that it is the newest of all the transcontinental routes proposed, its promoters are confident that they can demonstrate that it is the best because it is open for traffic today. The directors of the association held a meeting at St. Joseph, Mo., on July 25 and at that time reports were received from all sections showing the roads in excellent condition for immediate travel. From Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado and Utah enthusiasts reported an enormous amount of work done in construction and development of roads in anticipation of heavy travel over the route in 1915. This transcontinental route has many historic associations and really is a joining together of many of the trails made by the Indians and the earliest pioneers which were followed by the railroads when these were constructed. From here eastward and westward the route traverses some of the most wonderful scenic spots of Colorado and Utah. East of Springfield, Ill., this highway connects with the National Old Trails which join it at Terre Haute and with the road that runs along the southern shore of Lake Erie. At Salt Lake it joins with the road which has been adopted by the National Lincoln Highway through western Utah, Nevada and California to San Francisco.

RECORD WHEAT CROP IN UNITED STATES AT LAST REALIZED

BANNER YIELD IN AMERICA ACCOMPANIED BY SERIOUS LOSSES IN RUSSIA AND ARGENTINE.

CORN BELOW AVERAGE

Drouth in Southern States is Responsible for Decline This Season—Oat Crop is Large—Cotton Moderate.

Crop	Estimated Yield 1914
Wheat	2,200,000,000 bushels
Corn	1,350,000,000 bushels
Oats	1,135,000,000 bushels
Rye	44,000,000 bushels
Barley	201,000,000 bushels
Hay	69,000,000 tons
Cotton	14,000,000 bales

Expectations of large crops this year were early impressed upon the public by the publicity given the initial reports of the agricultural department. The country suffered from the slow down in activity, which reflected a world condition and which was undoubtedly aggravated by the very small yield of corn in some of the central and western states. The season, which started out so brilliantly in the spring, failed to maintain its prodigious promise, with the single exception of winter wheat. Weather conditions over a large part of the country were distinctly unfavorable to the development of the corn crop and also to oats and cotton. The losses, like last year's were not general but confined partly to the same areas as the previous season with an enlargement southward. The aggregate production of the country is still maintained over a ten-year mean, but in those ten years some very good and several very poor crops were gathered. The wheat crop, passing all previous records, and furnishing a surplus far in excess of any previous season, has kept the public attention focused on large crops, and the expectancy that the reduction would be hastened by big reduction. The corn crop falls into less than the average of recent years and promises somewhere around last year's production on an area of a million acres less, and with no violent losses such as afflicted Kansas last year. The oat crop is generally good northward, but poor in the southern portion of the belt, where the heat rather than dry weather did the injury at the filling period. The hay crop suffered less, and the yield is the second in succession below a generous production, though above the previous season. The cotton crop has been subject to extremes of climate from the start of planting, but prospects are for an average yield.

Wheat Makes Record. Of predicted, much expected, at last realized, the wheat crop of the United States has made a record alone in aggregate bushels but in yield per acre. The total crop of winter and spring wheat is 2,200,000,000 bushels, a record of last year of 763,350,000 bushels, making the third year of abundant wheat and the second in succession of record crops. The yield of winter wheat made the great crop, the spring wheat fell under a light rain, and a magnificent crop of spring wheat gave the winter wheat plant an unusual start for this country, and dry weather in the late spring and early summer, while unfavorable to other plant growth, ripened the wheat to perfection. For years the leaders in agricultural affairs have dreamed, and imagined, a season when the wheat crop of this country would make a record of a billion bushels;—1914 came near to the record, 90,000,000 nearer than other years, and some season when both winter and spring wheat bear their fullest average harvest. Agricultural methods have been improving; the western lands are being given plant food; the pressure of population is creating a more intensified operation of the vast fields, and the country is slowly coming to the mark set by the enthusiasts. The wheat crop this year is more than sufficient for the needs of the country and the surplus for export is record one. Our domestic requirement for bread and seed is now $25,000,000, and ten years ago a crop of that proportion was regarded as a banner one.

World Yield Falls Off. It is singular that in the plenty of our winter wheat, in the excessive amount available for feeding other nations, the world's production of wheat has fallen off. In Russia where a billion bushel crop was gathered last year, the yield has fallen off 150,000,000. In the present war region of eastern Europe, the fertile Danube plains are burned by hot winds, and the yield there is smaller. Argentina the big southern continent exporter, the yield was reduced almost half; even on our northern border—the western prairie provinces of Canada—not over two-thirds of last year's big crop has been gathered. The peoples of western Europe, except France and Spain, are dependent upon the wheat fields of the world for bread; England, Holland, Belgium, Scandinavia, require 400,000,000 bushels added to their 110,000,000 bushels home raised crop. The war has removed Russia from the exporting field, and the Danubian regions have no outlet for their small surplus year. The big crop in this country is providential to England, and contiguous nations; otherwise the difficulty of procuring sufficient food might have turned the tide of war sentiment in the administrative offices. The Council knowing that over the sea was a supply of breadstuffs felt fortified to enter the war circle and at the same time set apart a portion of her fleet to convey our big surplus to her shores, and to those of her allies whose dependence for bread is upon the outside.

A billion bushel wheat crop was lost through the decline in the condition of spring wheat during the month of July. The promise in that section had been exceptional, the conditions of the fore part of the summer were ideal, similar to those which two years ago produced an average yield of nineteen bushels, which, if accomplished, this Crop Condition Summary.

• Taking the country over the outturn of the crops may be summarized as follows:
• East: Average yields of grains and fruits; tobacco crop in acreage on account of late spring.
• Central West: Wheat good about an average; corn and oats badly hurt in the south half; early hay crop good, late poor; fruits short on account of the dry weather.
• North Central: Winter wheat splendid; spring wheat hurt by hot weather and rust; corn an average and acreage increased; oats and average; potatoes excellent.
• West: Wheat yield phenomenal; early large, breaking all records; corn much better than last year; oats good; hay good; generally all crops splendid.
• South Atlantic and Gulf States: Dry weather until recently; cotton outlook improved; corn shorter than last year; tobacco below average, improving with recent rains.
• Southwest: Wheat good in spots, very wet spring delayed planting and acreage of other crops reduced; cotton prospect fair at this time; corn poor; except along the gulf section where fair crop was made.
• Mountain States: Wheat good except extreme north on eastern slopes where drought cut down yield; hay good.
• Pacific Coast: Excellent yield of all crops; record outturn in wheat and barley, especially in citrus fruits; citrus crops above average; other crops above average; deciduous fruits excellent.

year would have put the crop over the billion mark. The rains which were normal during the fore part of the summer, and even sufficient during the midsummer, were attended by high temperatures and excessive conditions, moisture and hot weather usually produce black rust, a fungus growth always present in the spring wheat region. Several manifestations of this trouble in other years spoiled the present year's crop. The ravages of the rust this year were quite general in South Dakota and Minnesota. In addition, extreme temperatures caused premature ripening of the grain, and a great loss of yield. The acreage was reduced from last year by reason of a late spring and wet soil. The crop is indicated at 241,770,000 which was around last year's final month ago, when the spring wheat was in its early stages of growth, and the promise for all crops was far in excess of last year's, the price market began to break under the coming deluge of the golden grain. The early harvest in this country that the record crop carried very little assurance of compensating the farmer for his toil, and for the rental value of his land, and before the year became probable, the breaking down of some spring wheat crop started the price the other way, and now the American farmer is assured of an average price of recent years and the compensation for his crop will be excellent.

Drouth Hurts Corn. When we turn from the great winter wheat harvest to the other crops, the outlook is not so bright. Corn is better than last year in the feedstuffs or coarse grains. Next to wheat, in fact above it in value to the country is the corn crop—the great domestic food of man and animal. The winter wheat which helped wheat to its fine harvest in the winter seeded states, were unfavorable to the corn; dry weather with high temperatures. The corn plant thrives with moisture and hot weather, but when that moisture is short the hot winds and scorching rays set back the vigor of the plant. For five years the country has been vexed with a large dry area, shifting slightly each year, until last season, working up and down the trans-Missouri country. Last year it crossed the rivers, and penetrated into Illinois and the lower sections of Indiana and Ohio. This year it has been enlarged, covering the same section, and extending south and east, and in the Ohio Valley a hundred and fifty miles north of last year's boundary. It covers a large part of Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, all of Louisiana, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, and portions of Georgia, the Carolinas and Virginia; a territory which two years ago raised 1,510,000,000 bushels, and last year 1,470,000,000 bushels of corn. Two years ago the crop was exceptionally large in the northern states, small in the southern; last year the south had almost record yield, and the northern states were far below the average, and Kansas had the lowest yield of record. Year in and year out the country now covered by the dry area has produced 60 per cent of the corn crop. The indication at the time of report was that the crop showed a promise of 2,651,855,000 bushels on a total acreage a million short of last year. Dry weather has continued, the moisture deficiency is being made more apparent, and the indication given will necessarily be small if any. Last August the crop depreciated 200,000,000 bushels on account of drought. Even with a yield of 2,500,000,000 bushels, the crop could be counted poor. A few years ago it would have been called a record one, for corn like other crops has been slowly advancing in the average yield per acre. Last year's crop of 2,450,000,000 bushels following a yield of 3,125,000,000 bushels in 1912 did not disturb the country as much as expected, when measured by agricultural results—the loss of hogs and cattle from lack of feed being less than anticipated. The present year's crop promising above last year's total, will be at least an improvement over the western country, for Kansas which barely harvested its seed in 1913 will this year have a fair crop. In the lake region comprising the northern portions of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois and the estates of Wisconsin and Michigan, the crop is again excellent; north of the Missouri river, and extending westward, the crop has been good. The crop will be good.

Argentine Corn Crop. The Argentine corn crop was again large this year, and a deficiency of our crop which would have been felt the worst on the Atlantic coast, will be helped out by the imports from that country. The price will again be high, and in the form of direct compensation to the producer make up some what for the lower yield, though on the other hand it will not develop the traffic for the railroads anticipated earlier in the season nor will there be much incentive in the sections of small yield to increase the number of food animals.

The oats crop which made a great record two years ago, and followed with a yield close to that record last year, promises the same generous yield this year. This grain takes the place of corn in feeding, and last year it helped out the country very materially, and a like result may be expected from the present year's crop. Our correspondents report a crop aggregating 1,136,591,000 bushels which compares with 1,121,000,000 officially ascertained last year.

The total production of the three great cereal crops is 4,700,019,000 bushels, which in the aggregate exceeds last year's crops by nine per cent. This is a good improvement, though not up to the early expectations of the country. The hay crop fell below the record of two years ago, but exceeded last year's by nearly ten per cent. The drought came too late to make an extensive damage as a year ago. The spring was unusually dry, and general moisture was plentiful and the crop had a splendid start, and while there was but one cutting over a large part of the country, the yield was more abundant than last year's. In the lake regions in Iowa and northward and in the eastern states, the yield was above the average which brought the crop up to a higher volume than expected. The changing of fields over a large part of the country from native grasses to alfalfa has been one of the most potent factors in raising the yield of hay during the past two years of drought over that of other years, and such conditions as have prevailed in these seasons proved the desirability of much of the hay lands. It has been better farming rather than the hay which has given the country the best yields in dry seasons.

The use of hay for cattle feeding serves to turn the edge of the short corn crop, for in weight the increase of 55,000,000 tons of hay over last year, is equal to 180,000,000 bushels of corn and will go far in maintaining farm and food animals during the coming season.

Cotton Yield Fair. Cotton—the great export crop—promises only a fair yield this year, due to a start all over the best. The early part of the spring when planting was under way east of the Mississippi river, drought set in (and has continued to some extent ever since) and the germination was very slow. The soil was hard to work, and in many sections planting was delayed in the expectation of rain, and finally the entire crop was put in in the dry. Rains were light all during the season, though lately there has been some good precipitation along the coastal region. The dry weather permitted the young plants to be worked carefully, and the fields were never cleaned up, and the result was a crop of the deep penetration of the root, which is confined to a main trunk, with two small laterals, the plant has withstood the drought and hot weather much better than was expected, and where only slight rains fell from time to time the crop promise is fairly good. In the southwest the reverse conditions prevailed. Heavy rains fell in during March over Texas and Oklahoma, and the result was some constancy until late in June. Planting was delayed to such an extent that not more than 90 per cent of the expected acreage was put under cultivation. Since the rains ceased, the drought has taken hold of the section, and with hot weather, further damage to a late start was added. Recently there have been fairly good rains over a part of the southwest and the plant is showing a good effect. The short crop promised to be very remunerative to the planter, for the world's requirement is for 15,000,000 bales annually of American cotton, of which 8,000,000 bales are needed abroad. With every indication of a yield much under the indication the market for the staple was holding to a higher price than usual in advance of the crop, but the outbreak of war has completely controlled the market, and in one sense it is fortunate that a smaller yield than recent averages developed, for the weight of the crop now in sight will be difficult to finance at the ports of Europe are opened and cotton spinning resumed on a normal basis. On last year's price the value of the cotton alone was $900,000,000 and the value of the seed, for commercial purposes was $200,000,000, making a total crop value of $1,100,000,000 of which our exports were $700,000,000 or 65 per cent of the whole. The shrinkage of the money value of the cotton crop on account of war this year is at least $300,000,000, and the burden falls almost entirely upon the southern states. The consumption of cotton in this country averages only 55,000,000 bales, and in spite of somewhat enlarged operations by reason of stoppage of manufacture abroad, very little inward will be made into the supply, for the facilities are not present, and a cotton mill can not be built and equipped in time to take advantage of the temporary abundance of operations abroad. Our other crops are generally fair; barley is good, above an average, but an average, rye good, potatoes have suffered a little from drought in the northern belt where the crop is mostly grown; fruits are generally good, as the region in which they are most largely grown has been singularly free from trouble.
